copyright to aid us and the Club's continuing history initiatives, with funds going towards an online museum offering, and a library containing images and text from every year of our incredible story.

A range of posters, greeting cards, and postcards have been produced along with a bespoke Jigsaw puzzle (which will be delivered in time for Christmas). These are available via our website with all profits ring-fenced for future heritage developments.

Details of all the items and prices can be found here: wimbledoninsportinghistory.org/store Orders can be posted or collected from the Club on match days.

A year ago WISH commissioned legendary sports artist Andy Kitson, well known across motor racing and private commissions for Formula One racers, but this was his first football-related offering. The concept was to create a dressing room scene representing Wimbledon football's whole history from 1889 to the present day – and so The Greatest Team design was created. Andy spent time with John Lynch, Managing Director of WISH, bouncing ideas about how this could be achieved. We didn't want it to be reflective of any individuals, as that will come later with The Hall of Fame launch in 2024. The original painting represents players in kits throughout our whole existence. It starts with the old Plough Lane dressing room on the left, before morphing into the current one in our new stadium, back home at Plough Lane after three decades away. Of course, our Womble are there, and if you look closely there are several less obvious nods to our heritage. The image will be enlarged and installed at strategic points around the stadium, ensuring that it's accessible to all. Andy kindly gave us 100% of course, our Womble mascots Wandle and Haydon
